

SOLDIERS' REUNION

Survivors of 22d Pa. Cavalry Met at This Place.

MANY VETERANS PRESENT

Good Program Rendered and Enjoyed by All—Next Reunion at Sallito September 22, 1910.

The survivors of the 22d Pa. Volunteer Cavalry, eastern division, held their 15th annual reunion in the Court House at Bedford on Thursday, October 28. Three meetings were held—at 11 a. m. after arrival of train from the north, 2 and 7 p. m. Dr. A. Enfield of Bedford presided and at the first meeting delivered an address of welcome which was responded to by Sergt. A. H. Crum of Aitch, Sergt. David M. Snyder of Beallsville, Washington County, and Sergt. David Hart of Canonsburg. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. M. L. Culler of Bedford.

At the afternoon meeting the minutes of last meeting, at Huntingdon on October 22, 1908, were read by the secretary, Dr. A. R. McCarthy, who also read a letter from Col. A. J. Greenfield of Chicago, and spoke of the history of the 22d Pa. Vol. Cavalry, prepared by Comrade Prof. S. C. Farrar of Pittsburg, now ready for publication, and some names were taken of those who will buy the book when published. He characterized it as one of the best regimental histories yet written, being a complete history of the part of the war and the campaigns in which the 22d participated, and a valuable contribution to the history of the war.

The afternoon meeting was addressed by Hon. J. H. Longenecker and the evening meeting by R. C. McNamara, Esq., and Rev. J. E. Morris of Monongahela. The addresses were all good and very much appreciated. Addresses were also made by Comrades A. H. Crum, David Hart, David M. Snyder, Lewis Conner, R. W. Hudson, W. B. Eakin, C. M. Buck, H. H. Bowers, Maj. S. F. Statler, and others, and the evening meeting became so interesting that it was prolonged until nearly 11 o'clock and then the "boys" were loath to depart.

It will be forty-four years on the 6th of November since the "boys" of the 22d Cavalry came home from the war. Of the nearly 800 of this division of the regiment who went to the front in '63 and '64 probably more than half are lying beneath the sod, and of the others we only have the addresses of a few more than 200. The years are rapidly rolling around and it will not be so very long until the last of all other survivors of that great war, will have answered their last roll-call here and will have gone. Let us hope, to join that Grand Army above where wars shall be no more.

The next reunion is to be held at Sallito on September 22, 1910; R. W. Hudson to be president and A. H. Crum, vice president.

The deaths reported since our last meeting are Daniel Locke of Orbisonia, Co. A, six months; Lieut. W. C. Gayton of Mt. Union, October 19, 1909, Co. D, six months; Sergt. John Sloan of Bald Eagle, Co. H.; William H. Pheasant of Elkhart, Ind., Co. I; Sergt. James M. Vanzandt of Middleburg, September 1909, Co. K; Rev. J. W. Poffenberger of Vandergrift, September 30, 1909, Co. M. A number more have died but their deaths not reported.

Snyder of Beallsville. F—John W. Steel of Everett. G—Dr. A. Enfield of Bedford. H—Samuel Ake of Bedford, Lewis Conner, Samuel Leach and James H. KILLED BY EXPLOSION OF GAS AT McKEES ROCKS.

Jacob S. Otto, aged 51 years and a native of this county, died Saturday morning, October 30, in a hospital at McKees Rocks as the result of an explosion of gas.

He was employed by the Pressed Steel Car Company and boarded at 427 Island Avenue. On going to his room Friday night an explosion of gas occurred which shook the house and enveloped him in flames. A parole officer of the Morgantza Reform School, Rev. Ralph Elliott, who was in the house at the time, rushed into the room and carried Mr. Otto out. Both were taken to the Ohio Valley Hospital where the latter passed away at 7 a. m.

Deceased was married to Miss Mary Weyant, who died two years ago. One son, Garfield of Altoona, survives. He also leaves six sisters and brothers, as follows: Mrs. Mary Kegaris of South Dakota, Thomas W. of Altoona, Mrs. Hetty Berkheimer of Salemville, and W. S. H. P. and A. S. Otto, all of St. Clairsville.

The body was taken to his former home at St. Clairsville on Monday where services were held in the Lutheran Church at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Salem officiating. Interment at that place.

Home Totally Destroyed

John V. Deremer's house in Centerville, with nearly all the contents, was entirely destroyed by fire the early part of this week. This is the second fire Mr. Deremer has had since he started up for himself. He was carrying $800 insurance. This leaves them in very bad shape as they did not save any of their clothing only what they wore and all their beds and bedding were burned.

KILLED AT HUNTINGDON

Two Juniata Students Met Death on Railroad.

John M. Dively, aged 18 years, three months and 17 days, residing at Queen, this county, a senior at Juniata College, Huntingdon, was killed by main line express train No. 12, at H. M. Block station, a short distance west of Huntingdon, at 11:47 Sunday morning, October 31. In company with William A. Deemer of Indiana County, after Sunday School he took a walk to inspect the water power plant of the Juniata Hydro Company at Warrior's Ridge. While going home they had to cross the tracks and waited until a freight had passed. On account of the noise they did not notice the approaching passenger and Mr. Deemer, stepping on the track, was hit by the train and hurled against Mr. Dively, both being instantly killed.

The body of John Dively was brought to Queen to the residence of his sister, Mrs. D. A. Claar. Tuesday forenoon interment was made in the Upper Claar Cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Emmert Swigart, one of the professors of Juniata College, in the presence of a very large gathering.

The unfortunate young man is survived by his father, Chauncey F. Dively, a brother Mark, also a student at Juniata College, and the above-named sister.

Mrs. C. B. Williams

At the home of her parents in Johnstown on November 1, Ella G., wife of Clarence B. Williams, passed away at the age of 30 years, two months and 28 days. Death resulted after a long illness from dropsy.

Deceased was the eldest child of W. S. and Amelia (Weisel) Morgart and was born in Everett. The family resided at this place for a number of years and her many friends here will regret to learn of her death. The patience and fortitude with which she bore her afflictions were remarkable. She was perfectly resigned to her fate and death seemed to be a relief.

Six years ago she was married to Clarence B. Williams who survives, as also do her parents, one brother, Fred, and two sisters—Sarah, a professional nurse, and Jessie, at home. The body was taken to Schellsburg where interment was made yesterday, the services being conducted by Rev. Mechtley of Johnstown and Rev. Gumbert of Schellsburg.

An Excellent Lecture

The temperance lecture delivered in the Court House Monday evening by Rev. G. H. Vibbert of Boston was one full of interest and unanswerable arguments. Fortunate indeed was the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to secure the services of such an able speaker for a last message before Decision Day!

The work of Rev. Vibbert throughout Bedford County has been of untold value in the creating of increased temperance sentiment and quickening of the conscience of undecided voters.

HECKERMAN LETTER

At the National Capital—In Orange County, Va.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 24, '09. Whilst I am at the Howard House, the hotel that I always stop at when in the city, I look out of my window and see that the old Penna. R. R. depot has been torn down and carted away. It was a landmark for very many visitors whenever they came here.

The new depot, the finest in the United States, is easily reached from the hotel and the hotel is as easily reached from the station, and I advise all my friends, when visiting this, the capital city of our country, to stop at the Howard House. Take a Penn Avenue car in front of the Union Station, pay the price of a glass of beer and tell the conductor to drop you off at the Howard House, register and tell any one of the clerks that you are a friend of Dad, the peanut man, and you will be well cared for. Mr. Mitchell, the genial manager, promised me this forenoon to have the elevator greased and running by the time I got back.

We had a hard rain here last night, and this morning is black and cold. I see a number of eight-wheeling automobiles on the various corners and each seems to have a couple stool pigeons in it. These are young women that are hired to sit in the autos, so that persons passing may see that they have some passengers and will soon start. Now to those of you about to take an auto this is a warning.

I landed here last evening; was seen and heard at Union Station though I did not know it and when I landed at the hotel was told that I was wanted at Fitz Reuters to have supper. Now the thought of my being invited out to have supper at a swell cafe as soon as I landed sent a thrill of pleasure all through me. I assure you I was not long getting there, though I did not know who had phoned me or who knew that "peanuts" was in the city, and imagine my delight when I was met at the door by a Bedfordite and dined to the queen's taste. Selah. On my way there I met Irvine Haderman, my brother-in-law, who told me that his youngest daughter was quite ill with fever. I was sorry to hear that and much sadder to hear a little later that my friend, H. D. Tate of Bedford, had suddenly died. Humphrey will be missed by all. He was much like his father, having a kind word for each one he met. Bedford has, during a very few years, lost many of her best citizens by the grim reaper.

Since writing you last I have made some long jumps. I have carried a sunshade for six weeks and only had to raise it once to keep my new hat dry. Last week I was at Orange, the county seat of Albemarle County, Va. Orange about a year ago was visited one Sunday morning by a destructive fire that destroyed half of the town, and six months later another fire occurred that destroyed the balance. 'Twas a very pretty town before these fires.

Albemarle County is the home of the Albemarle Pippin, one of the nicest apples for all purposes that grows. There is a barrel of these luscious apples sent to King Edward each fall. Just who sends them I do not know, but the practice has been kept up for many years. While in Roanoke the other day I phoned Dr. Kirk, who is married to Miss Gettys of Bedford, and was mighty sorry to hear of the illness of his only son, Dr. Allen Kirk, one of the best and brightest surgeons in all the south. Dr. said the balance of the family are all well, and his wife wished to be remembered to all her old friends in ye ancient town.

I have been in the prohibition country for quite a while. The arresting of persons who walk the streets and sell you a pint of moonshine whiskey has become a by word and it is no use to arrest one of these blind tiger men for you can never get a conviction. Lately the court, realizing this, asked the pastors of the various churches to send in lists of names of men whom they believe will make honest and capable jurors. This was done in an effort to improve the class of jurymen. The choosing of names by the clergymen from among their own parishioners and neighbors is expected to entirely eliminate politics and other evil practices from the selection of juries.

I have had one of the longest trips I have ever made, yet it has been one of the most pleasant. The weather has been ideal and I have been very well, not an ache or pain. Yet I change beds every night and scarcely ever eat three meals at the same hotel; drink all kinds of water, eh. A friend sitting near me reading as I write says "But you drink no kind of liquor and have always been too dumb to enjoy the luxuries of a good cigar or chew." He may be right but I will never try to learn.

Yours truly,
M. P. Heckerman

A PUBLIC BENEFIT

Bedford People Greatly Interested in the Generous Offer of F. W. Jordan.

The people have already demonstrated that they would rather trust a man who is naturally honest than one who is honest only because he had to be.

F. W. Jordan has a firmly established reputation for square dealing and sterling honesty. When he told the people that Rexall Remedies are the purest and most dependable medicines that it is possible for modern science to produce, and that he would tell the public what each one of these 300 or more remedies contained, and that he sold Rexall Remedies on his personal guarantee that they would give entire satisfaction or they would not cost the user a single cent, he was believed.

Ever since this announcement F. W. Jordan's store has been largely patronized by people buying Rexall Remedies, all of which proves that this store has the confidence of the people, and that honesty is the best policy.

There is no "cure-all" among the Rexall Remedies. There are different and separate medicines, each one devised for a certain human ailment or a class of ailments closely allied. For instance Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are recommended for the positive relief of stomach irritation, indigestion, flatulency and dyspepsia. They are rich in Bismuth-Subnitrate, Pepsin and Carminatives. They are prepared by special processes which perfect and enhance the great remedial value of these well-known medicinal agents. This remedy sells for 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00 per package. Every one suffering from stomach disorder should try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, inasmuch as they cost nothing if they do not satisfy.

Remember, F. W. Jordan's store is the only store in Bedford where these remedies may be obtained, and every one in need of medicine is urged to investigate and take advantage of the frank and generous manner in which they are sold.

The Individual

I will obey my light
Though my light be night;
This is the only right.

I will declare my word
Though to the world absurd,
Thus only may I be heard.

I will live out my dream
Though it should folly seem,
And but for me the gleam

I will pursue my way
Though no illuming ray
Eases the toilsome day.

Others may scout the plan,
Wise men my nature ban—
I will be my own man.

—Richard Wightman, in Success Magazine.

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and break up your cold quickly. CURED BRONCHITIS

Mrs. Hopkins Says Her Life Was Saved—Choked and Gasped for Breath.

"Some five years ago I was taken with a bad attack of bronchitis. I was affected with a bronchial cough and cold, the cough was generally much more apparent at night, and I would wake up choking and gasping for breath, and there seemed to be a terrible stoppage in my throat and tubes. My throat was tender and irritable, and had an aching sensation, which was especially bad at times. I doctored and used several remedies, but received no permanent relief until I used Hyomel. This remedy is certainly infallible, and it saved my life, and I accord it the credit which it deserves. There is nothing too strong for me to say regarding Hyomel."—Mrs. Ada Hopkins, 8 Cutter Ave., Coldwater, Mich., August 22, 1908.

F. W. Jordan sells Hyomel (pronounced High-o-me) and he guarantees it to cure bronchitis, catarrh, asthma, croup, hay fever, coughs and colds, or money back.

TOO MUCH GOOD LUCK

By FLORA MILLIGAN.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"I maintain," said Brown, "that life is a game of cards. It consists of two parts—skill and luck."

"How about the condition of life into which one is born?" said Jones. "That's a part of the luck. A man is born into certain circumstances in lieu of cards and certain ability in lieu of skill."

"And is opportunity a part of the cards?"

"Yes; that is to be counted with luck."

"Suppose one has plenty of skill, but no opportunity?"

"He is in the same fix as a skillful player whose cards are bad."

"Gentlemen," said a seedy individual at a neighboring table—they were in a cafe—"pardon the interruption, but I couldn't help hearing your conversation, and I am interested in its purport. Permit me to add one statement to those you have made. It is this—a man's game may be spoiled by too much luck."

"That is his own fault," said Brown. "He shouldn't lose his head."

"One may be ruined by good luck and not be at the slightest fault."

"That statement on its face is incorrect, a contradiction," replied Brown. "I can give you a case."

"Do so," said Jones. "If you satisfy us in the matter you may order the best dinner the house affords and I will pay for it."

"With a bottle of champagne as my contribution," supplemented Brown.

"Done," said the stranger. "Had it not been for too much good luck I should now be dining and winning others instead of accepting your bounty, giving you nothing but an illustration in return. When I was a young man my father, dying, told me that his brother, my uncle, who was a millionaire bachelor, intended to make me his heir and I must be very circumspect in my treatment of him. I had sense enough to see the situation and—"

"Overdid it," Brown put in. "You disgusted him, and your?"

"Not at all," the stranger went on. "I grew very fond of him and did not need to pretend to be interested in him. He was smart enough to perceive this, and we grew nearer together every day. The old gentleman was very fond of playing poker hands for a small stake. Every night before he went to bed he insisted on my sitting down with him for an hour at this diversion."

"I see," said Brown. "You were silly enough to let him win, and it angered him."

"Or to win his money," added Jones. "I must do either one or the other, gentlemen, and so I did in the end, but I shall come to that in a moment. For a time the game wavered between us. Sometimes my uncle and sometimes I would be ahead. But one night, the fatal night," the stranger moaned, "I held a full hand of aces against my uncle's full hand of kings. Naturally we both bet high—that is, for a game intended only to help pass an hour before going to bed—and of course I won."

"The next deal fell to my uncle, and neither of us got more than a single pair. I then dealt and gave my uncle four tens and myself a royal flush. I did not bet high, but when I showed down my uncle looked surprised. His next deal was unimportant, but at my next I gave him three aces and myself four queens."

"Oh, well," protested Brown. "If a man has a mind to do that sort of thing he can't blame his luck."

"I was neither. I knew nothing about putting cards where I wanted them. Had I known I should have given the winners to my uncle. I had simply struck a remarkable run of luck. I was horrified at it and would have been delighted to change it, for I saw that my uncle was beginning to think that I was cheating him. I took advantage of one low hand he dealt me to bet high, but only made matters worse, for he held lower cards than I."

"And so it went on. Every time I dealt I saw my uncle watching my fingers with a terrible suspicion on his face."

"Why," interrupted Brown, "didn't you bet low?"

"So I did on one occasion. I held three tens and bet a mere trifle. My uncle held four aces, and when he saw that I had stayed out, he holding his only big hand, he assumed that I did so with a knowledge of where the cards lay."

"And so the game went on, I always topping him, seeing a fortune pass away from me and having no power to stop the luck that was ruining me. How I wished that I had learned dealing cards professionally so that I could have given my uncle better cards than mine! At last he rose from the table and, pointing to the door, said: 'Go, and never let me see your face again!'"

"The next day he changed his will and a week later he was dead."

The stranger ceased to speak. Brown looked at Jones, and Jones looked at Brown. Then they called the proprietor and paid the bet. But they did not remain to see the stranger eat. They passed out he followed them with a corner of his left eye, but said nothing.

"What lesson," said Jones, "do you draw from this episode?"

"That it is singular how some men who have been given high cards in the game of life will play them for such small stakes."

"Just so," replied Jones.

ADVANCED STYLES.

Fall Costumes Will Have Draped Skirts—Veils With Big Spots.

Rounded drapery in front is the newest "movement." In skirts it takes a very stately, well poised woman to carry off this mode, as the folds around the knees have a way of catching out in walking that is disconcerting, to say the least. This drapery is sometimes caught up at each side by jeweled ornaments or rosettes placed just below the hips.

Midsummer veils are conspicuous by their bigness. The prettiest ones are

In great squares of dotted tissue or shaded chiffon, the former with borders of satin stripes and the latter with hemstitched edges.

The skirt of heavier material with lingerie blouse makes such a good all-round costume that it is always needed. The model illustrated shows the newest style of skirt and blouse that is trimmed on singularly effective lines.

A Joker

A seedy-looking man entered a store in Trenton the other day, and asked for assistance, backing up his request with a long tale of sickness and lack of employment.

With a wink at his clerk, the merchant pointed to a friend who happened to be in the place, and said: "Ask that gentleman. He is the proprietor. I am only a clerk."

The friend received the beggar's request in a sympathetic manner, and, turning to the merchant, remarked: "This seems to be a worthy case. Mr. Jones. Give him a dollar from the cash register," and walked out of the store.

It was in vain that the merchant protested that it had been a joke. So insistent did the seedy one become that "de boss's" directions should be carried out, that it was finally necessary to do so in order to be rid of him.—November Lippincott's.

A Religious Author's Statement

Rev. Joseph H. Esperman, Salisbury, N. C., who is the author of several books, writes: "For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and last winter I was suddenly stricken with a severe pain in my kidneys and was confined to bed eight days unable to get up without assistance. My urine contained a thick white sediment and I passed same frequently day and night. I commenced taking Foley's Kidney Remedy, and the pain gradually abated and finally ceased and my urine became normal. I cheerfully recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy." Ed. D. Heckerman

MY LADY DAFFODIL.

How She Happened to Wear Her Yellow Gown That Night.

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.
(Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.)

In Miss Priscilla's garden there was a clump of daffodils.

"I am going to pick all of them," said Judy Perkins, who was Miss Priscilla's niece.

"Please don't, Judy," said Miss Priscilla faintly.

"Why not?"

"Because," was Miss Priscilla's woman's reason.

Judy looked at her. "Tell me," she urged. "You are blushing, and you can't have any secrets from me, Aunt Pris."

Miss Priscilla beamed. It was such a new delight to be bossed by this beautiful being who had come all the way from Europe to the little country village to see for the first time her father's sister.

"Tell me," Judy repeated and drew the little lady down beside her on the garden bench.

Judy listened intently while Miss Priscilla stammered out her little romance. "So you and he always sat on this bench by the daffodil bed, and you wore a little yellow dainty gown, and he called you 'My Lady Daffodil'?"

"Yes," Miss Priscilla's voice was dreamy. "And he used to quote some verses that ended:

"And then my heart with pleasure fills
And dances with the daffodils."

"Why didn't you marry him?" Judy murmured.

"There was a misunderstanding," Miss Priscilla said, "and he went away, and I haven't heard from him since, and that was twenty years ago."

Judy enveloped the shabby black figure in a big hug. "Dear Aunt Pris," she said, "and you have been alone and lonely all these years, while I have been having a good time."

"You couldn't know," Miss Priscilla said, "that after father and mother died I invested all of my money in a mining scheme that failed."

"No; we didn't know," Judy said, "and you have scrimped and saved and gone without pretty things while I have simply squandered piles of money on gowns."

"The one you have on is a beauty," Miss Priscilla said. "You look like a rose."

Judy laughed. "The rose and the daffodil," she sang. "We belong in your garden, Aunt Pris."

"Miss Priscilla," said some one from the other side of the fence, "may I have a rose from your garden?"

"I told you last night you couldn't, Bobbie," Judy retorted.

"Don't quarrel," Miss Priscilla expostulated. "Come up presently and have lunch with me."

As she left them Judy stood looking after the slender, old-fashioned figure. "Did she ever tell you about the daffodils, Bobbie?"

"No."

"He was her lover and he went away—and his name is Constantius Mercer."

"Do you know," Bobbie said, "there's a man at the hotel named Mercer—C. Mercer?"

Judy grasped his hands across the fence. "Bobbie, boy," she said, "suppose it should be the same one—and suppose he is coming back here to look up Aunt Pris."

"She must have changed awfully in that time," Bobbie said. "She—she isn't very pretty now, you know, Judy."

"She's beautiful," Judy said defiantly. "Her hair is lovely and her eyes—"

"Constantius is probably old and bald and ugly—but of course that doesn't count."

"Well, one doesn't exactly look for beauty in a man—"

"If one did one might be disappointed," Judy murmured pointedly. Then she went on, "If it is Constantius he'll probably be over this evening, Bobbie."

"Why?"

"Because she said he always came at twilight, and—and lovers don't forget such things, Bobbie."

"Don't they?" Bobbie demanded with some interest. "Will you remember that I always came at high noon in time for lunch, Judy?"

"Aunt Pris," Judy said a little later when they were at lunch, "I'm going to get the dinner tonight and I want it late. Bobbie's coming and I'm going to put on style."

Bobbie looked up in amazement, but Judy's eye warned him. "You are to come at 7:30," she said. "I want to show you what a true cook I am."

After Bobbie left Miss Priscilla protested.

"Please," Judy began, "let me get the dinner and I want to dress you up and have you play lady for once in your life. You are going to wear a pretty gown tonight," Judy said decidedly. "Come on upstairs and choose one, Aunt Pris."

Once in Judy's room that enthusiastic maiden dumped on the bed a dozen gowns before she found the one she sought.

"There," she said at last, as she took down a fluttering fluffing thing of pale yellow chiffon. "Put that on and see how you look, Aunt Pris."

"Oh, my dear," Miss Priscilla protested. But Judy commanded, and soon Miss Priscilla was incased in the wonderful gown.

"But your hair's wrong," Judy decided and pulled out hairpins and curled and patted and puffed the shining brown locks into a wonderful coffee-topped with a gold comb.

"Why, it's just the way I used to wear it," Miss Priscilla said.

"And now you are to take a look and go down to the garden seat and stay there until I call you to dinner."

A half hour later Bobbie appeared at the kitchen door.

"Judy," he said in an awed voice, "I didn't know clothes could make such a difference."

"What?" asked Judy, abstracted. She was deep in the mysteries of mayonnaise.

"Miss Priscilla is down by the daffodil bed in a yellow gown, and she looks like a girl with her hair done that way. And Constantius is headed for the garden. He is a good looking old duffer, Judy."

"I hope he has piles of money," Judy said.

"I'll run back and dress," Bobbie said. "But I wish you'd let me get the Lady of the Roses if he gets My Lady Daffodil, Judy."

"Go 'way," said Judy, but her eyes were kind.

There were golden shadows across the grass as Bobbie went toward the gate, and Miss Priscilla's gown made a spot of gold in the dusky corner where the daffodils grew. And at the gate Bobbie met Constantius, but the man scarcely bowed. His eyes were on that golden spot in the dusky corner.

"My Lady Daffodil," he said softly. Miss Priscilla turned, started up, and her eyes were like stars.

"Connie!" she gasped, and then Bobbie fled.

And when he crept back later he found shades on the silver candlesticks.

He produced a great bunch of daffodils and Judy put them in a silver bowl in the center of the table.

"Judy, this is my old friend Constantius Mercer," said a happy voice. Constantius held Judy's hand and looked down at her. "Priscilla and I have been wondering how you happened to make her wear that yellow gown today."

"A little bird told me you were at the hotel."

"A little bird?"

"Bob-o-link," said Bobbie from the other side of the table.

"Oh," and Constantius grasped the other's hand. "I told you I knew Miss Perkins?"

"Yes," said Bobbie, "and I told Judy, and thereby hangs the tale."

But Constantius was not listening—hand in hand with Miss Priscilla he was looking at the daffodils that nodded under the golden light.

And Judy, watching the old lovers, turned her eyes presently on her young lover and then her hand went out to him and behind the backs of the others he bent and kissed her.

Eccentric Henry Cavendish.

Whenever Henry Cavendish entertained his guests he would always give them the same fare—a leg of mutton.

A story goes that one day when four friends were coming it was asked him what should be ordered for dinner.

He answered, "A leg of mutton."

"Sir," was the reply, "that will not be enough for five." "Well, then, get two," said the host. When this gentleman died he was the largest holder of bank stock in England. He owned $1,157,000 in different public funds, besides freehold property of $8,000 a year and a balance of $50,000 on account.

This large income was allowed to accumulate without attention. On one occasion, when the bankers had in hand a balance of $80,000, they thought it well to acquaint Mr. Cavendish with the fact.

"If it is any trouble to you I will take it out of your hands. Do not come here to plague me." "Not the least trouble to us, sir, but we thought you might like some of it to be invested."

"Well, what do you want to do?" "Perhaps you would like half of it invested?" "Do so, do so, and do not come here to bother me or I'll remove it."

was the cheerful finale of the interview. Cavendish was seventy-eight years of age when he died in 1810, and he had never changed the fashion of his dress for sixty years.—London Graphic Truth Telling.

"Pa," said little George when his father attempted to carve the Sunday duck, "I can't tell a lie. I dulled the carving knife."

"My son," said George's father after looking gravely at him for a few minutes, "I am glad to forgive you. Let me explain why I forgive you. It is because you have not tried to deceive me. You have told the truth. Therefore you shall not suffer punishment. I wish to have you realize that it is always best to tell the truth. You see how easy it is. If you had lied to me about having dulled the knife it would have been very hard for you to keep from letting us find out the truth—in deed, we should have found it out sooner or later—and then you would have been punished. Thus you would have been made very unhappy in addition to having been compelled to invent a lot of falsehoods, which would have been very hard work. A liar always creates trouble and sorrow for himself. Remember that. How did you happen to dull the knife?"

"I was trying to whittle off one of the limbs of that tree you had set out in the back yard cause it's got a nice prong for a slingshot."

"George, you come into the attic with me! By thunder, I'll teach you not to cut limbs from trees that I've paid good money to have planted!"—Chicago Record-Herald

Patti's Parrot.

Mme. Adeline Patti, having some years ago in the fall in New York, heard of a wonderful talking parrot, one Jumbo. Forthwith she bought him at the unreasonably price of $200. Once in her possession Jumbo did not open his beak. Every blandishment failed, and at length she gave him up as hopeless. Then one morning the diva awoke with a severe sore throat. She was engaged to sing at the opera on the same night and naturally in great trepidation sent off for a throat specialist. Jumbo, whom she had quite forgotten, remained to all appearance asleep on his perch. As the door opened, however, and the specialist stood on the threshold, before ever Patti could open her lips Jumbo flapped his wings in great excitement.

"Oh, doctor," he croaked, "I'm so sick!" That was the first and last time since Mme. Patti became possessed of him that he deigned to speak.—Dundee Advertiser

Wide Doorways.

In the making over of an old house, as also in building a new one, it is always a good plan to have the doorways in the rooms on the first floor made unusually wide, almost as large as the rooms themselves, for in this way a greater sense of space and airiness is given even when the house is not large. Portieres may be hung in these roomy doorways to keep away drafts and to give a certain privacy, but in warm summer days and also when entertaining a large number of persons the portieres may be drawn back and almost the entire ground floor thus transformed into one large room.—Baltimore American.

Jealousy.

"My dear," said the wife of the eminent professor, "the hens have scratched up all that eggplant seed you sowed."

"Ah, jealousy!" mused the professor. And he sat down and wrote a twenty page article on the "Development of Envy in the Minds of the Lower Grade of Birds."

A Wonderful Discovery for Pimples.

It is surprising now quickly and easily pimples and black-heads can be cured with the following prescription, which was made known to the public a short time ago by a celebrated specialist on skin diseases, now retired, who used it in a long and successful practice with wonderful results. To use his own words: "There is nothing yet discovered that can compare with it for promptly removing pimples, eczema, black-heads, blotches, red face and nose, and in fact any disease of the skin; it also destroys the germ that causes the disease and makes the cure permanent." Following is the prescription, which can be prepared at any reliable Drug Store at a small cost: Clearola one-half ounce, Ether one ounce, Alcohol seven ounces. Mix, shake well and apply to the parts affected night and morning, letting it remain on the face for ten or fifteen minutes, then it can be wiped off. Do not use any soap, use instead a little oatmeal tied up in a cheese cloth bag.

Wide Doorways.

In the making over of an old house, as also in building a new one, it is always a good plan to have the doorways in the rooms on the first floor made unusually wide, almost as large as the rooms themselves, for in this way a greater sense of space and airiness is given even when the house is not large. Portieres may be hung in these roomy doorways to keep away drafts and to give a certain privacy, but in warm summer days and also when entertaining a large number of persons the portieres may be drawn back and almost the entire ground floor thus transformed into one large room.—Baltimore American.

Jealousy.

"My dear," said the wife of the eminent professor, "the hens have scratched up all that eggplant seed you sowed."

"Ah, jealousy!" mused the professor. And he sat down and wrote a twenty page article on the "Development of Envy in the Minds of the Lower Grade of Birds."

FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 5, 1909.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION

The returns of Tuesday's election are gratifying to the Democrats of the county, the candidate for Associate Judge being elected and the normal Republican majority being cut in half all along the line. The tabulated report elsewhere in this issue is self explanatory.

The whole fight was centered upon the candidates for Associate Judge and the election of Mr. Huff, under the circumstances was hardly to be expected. But The Gazette asked the Democrats of the county to stand by the ticket they had nominated and the Chairman of the County Committee sent out letters asking that they stand loyal, and they stood, except in a few districts. The victory is the greater because of the stand taken for Mr. Foor by the Anti-Saloon League. The Prohibitionists in most districts voted for Mr. Huff, and in several districts the Independent Republicans supported him.

The Democrats of the county are to be commended on the work they have done in this campaign.

Tuesday's election was the beginning of a political battle the end of which and the influence of which are as yet but matters of conjecture.

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

It seems to us that by this time the people of Bedford County should have their eyes open as to the workings of the Anti-Saloon League of Pennsylvania.

When on former occasions the League has endorsed men for official positions wholly unfit for the places or not representing by their acts the rights and principles for which the League is supposed to stand, it made monstrous blunders; but when it came into this county in the recent campaign and endeavored to force John W. Huff out of the race, to those familiar with existing conditions, it clearly revealed its position as an annex to the local Republican machine.

This organization was in large measure responsible for the election of Oster as a temperance advocate, and the people know the rest. It favored Reynolds as against Thropp, and in the recent election it favored Foor as against Huff, giving as a reason for the action the normal Republican majority and the fact that Foor had the Republican organization back of him (Great Scott!). But they failed to remove Mr. Huff, and despite their subsequent efforts for Foor, Huff's plurality over Foor was 399. Had it not been for the work of the League it would have been much larger, for in the East Ward of Bedford alone 14 Democrats voted the straight ticket except that they cut Huff's name and voted for Foor, having been persuaded that Foor was the stronger of the candidates. The lieutenants of the League have had the greater prestige because they have made their proclamations from between pulpits rather than from political platforms. From more than one pulpit in this county within these latter weeks congregations have been assured of Foor's strength, the assurances being based upon "inside and non-political information." But look at the returns!

There is no use to mince words. Rev. Mr. Nicholson should play straight or step down from the pedestal, and a number of his local lieutenants should follow suit.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Series of Lectures

Last week the W. C. T. U. of Schellsburg arranged for a series of lectures to be given by G. H. Vibbert, a noted temperance speaker of Boston. Mr. Vibbert is a man of long experience and unusual ability, and it is rarely that we have so able an advocate of the cause among us.

Meetings were held at Ryot, Fishertown, Point, Helixville and Schellsburg. Everywhere much interest was manifested and we feel that a lasting impression was made. We hope to have Mr. Vibbert with us again.

Schellsburg, November 3.

Farmers' Institutes

The farmers of this county will be interested to learn that there will be held this year a series of Farmers' Institutes at Osterburg on November 29 and 30 and at Imlertown on December 1 and 2.

A number of instructors from other parts of the state will be present to join with the farmers of this locality in the discussion of topics relative to agriculture. These meetings are free and open to all, and we have no doubt the farmers of this county will avail themselves of the advantages to be gained by attending these meetings.

FLUTTERINGS OF LA MODE.

Lingerie of Crossbarred Muslin Charming For Summer Wear.

A simple nightdress of crossbar lawn will appeal to women of dainty tastes, but scant pocketbooks. This garment is plain, with the low neck trimmed with a ribbon threaded strip of embroidery. The sleeves are kimono shaped, finished with lace edging.

I recently saw such a pretty hat made of raffia. The shape was medium in crown, with brim something like a sailor, but the brim dropped in mushroom style. It was smoothly covered, as though pasted on the frame, with a pretty shade of natural shantung, and trimmed in front with a long, fairly broad bow of silk, the loops edged with an inch wide braid in combination with soft wood browns, greens and tans.

Here is a negligee that is dainty as well as comfortable. It is made of dotted swiss muslin and trimmed simply with beading threaded with ribbon. The front opening makes it easy to slip on and to launder, and the whole effect is that of a one piece gown. Lawn, flowered batiste or even wash silk are all good materials to use instead of the swiss.

Combinations of plain with striped materials are very smart just now, and here is a little dress which is chic in the extreme, yet perfectly simple and childlike. The blouse is loose and comfortable, and the plaited skirt allows free movements. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Using a Life Preserver.

"The worst trouble about a life preserver," said an old sailor, "is that few people know what to do with one when it's thrown to them. Many a man would drown in trying to get a life preserver over his head. The average person struggling about in the water would try to lift up the big life ring and put it over his head. That only causes the man to sink deeper and take more water into his lungs."

"The proper way to approach a life preserver in the water is to take hold of the side nearest you and press upon it with all your weight. That causes the farther side to fly up in the air and down over your head. 'Ringing' you as neatly as a man ringing a cane at a country fair. After that the drowning man can be rescued."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE COLD HARBOR MEMORIAL

Visit to Historic Spot Related by Captain Hissong.

Point, Pa., Nov. 1, 1909.

Editor Gazette:—By request of quite a number of the readers of your grand old paper, I will try to give an account of the trip and dedicatory ceremonies at Cold Harbor, Va., on October 20. I left home on Saturday morning, October 16, in the company of some comrades; our number increased at every station along the road until we reached Richmond at 11:30 Saturday night.

I found that one of my colleagues had arrived before me and had been hard at work perfecting the plans of transportation from Richmond to Cold Harbor. Sunday morning my work commenced and kept up until Thursday morning, almost unceasingly. Several hundred comrades, with their wives and friends, had arrived by Monday night.

Monday afternoon J. Henry Brown, architect and contractor, of Richmond, Va., who found the granite and put up our handsome monument, called at Murphy's Hotel and insisted on me taking a drive with him. We visited the extensive granite quarries of the Richmond Company. The quarries lay about five miles away, a little to the northwest of Richmond. The company has modern machinery and an army of employees taking out granite, any length or breadth asked for. I saw pieces of granite 35 to 40 feet in length, and four to six feet thick. They have lots of work and their business is increasing. The erecting of the Cold Harbor monument was a fine advertisement for Mr. Brown, as you heard nothing but congratulations and commendations to the Cold Harbor Battlefield Commission for the beautiful shaft erected in memorial to over fifteen thousand heroic dead who lay peacefully sleeping in the cemetery at Cold Harbor and in other cemeteries around Richmond. Mr. Brown brought me back to the hotel after we had a nice supper at his home.

Wednesday morning the line formed at the hotel six hundred strong and marched to the Southern R. R. station where over nine hundred got on the train awaiting them. At Fair Oaks the party disembarked and took wagons, carriages, etc., for Cold Harbor Cemetery, six miles away. All the hacks, carriages, and in fact all the conveyances in the city were taken for the day. At the cemetery the crowd numbered over two thousand and fully twelve hundred were old comrades, representing the seventy-nine regiments that took part in the fight at Cold Harbor.

The program was as follows. Music; prayer by Rev. John W. Sayers, Chaplain of the Dept. of G. A. R.; music; unveiling of monument by Mrs. Juliet White Watson, daughter of Col. Dick White; presentation to Governor of Pennsylvania by Maj. P. D. Bricker, 13th Pa. Cav., Jersey Shore. A SINGULAR CASE.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"Are you detectives as smart as you appear to be in novels?" I asked of one who had served a long while at the business.

"The smart detective in real life usually gets left. Instead of letting the case work itself out he forms theories and fits facts to them. It's the methodical detective who wins. He works on the lines of what would naturally come about, narrowing probabilities till he drives the remaining few through one hole. The interesting features in detective work are the happenings. I have known many singular circumstances to betray a criminal. I knew of one case where a man was brought to the gallows by a twig growing up out of the ground, carrying a key with it."

"Please explain."

"My chief called me into his private office one day and showed me a shoot of some kind of bush. As a twig it had come up out of the ground, its tip running through the elliptical iron end of a key, which it carried up some five or six feet, growing around the key at the same time. He told me that some boys had found it in a thicket, and beneath it under an older growth lay the moldering body of a man. The chief's theory was that the key had been in the man's pocket and as the clothing decayed the key fell to the ground. A twig had sprouted under it through the ellipse, and as it grew of course the key came up with it."

"It was to be supposed that the body had been hidden there and the man had been murdered. I was put to work on the case and began, as I always do, methodically. That meant in this case to inquire into all disappearances as far back as possible. You may not be aware how many people will disappear within a given time. I found that from the village near by where the body was found and its surroundings no less than six persons had disappeared in ten years and had never been accounted for. I tried my key on the doors of the houses, so far as I could find them, where the missing ones had lived, but it fitted none of them."

"At last I heard of one Peter Moxon, who had lived alone on a small farm in the neighborhood, having one hired man. Some ten years back the man, Ik Colburn, gave out that Moxon had sold him his farm on easy payments and gone to Alaska. Colburn had worked the farm for several years, then deserted it. I learned that his desertion had occurred shortly after some one of Moxon's relatives had arrived to look up his kinsman. But the farm had remained unoccupied ever since Colburn's disappearance."

"Somehow as soon as I heard this story it struck me that I had got a clew to the mystery. I went to the Moxon farm and put the key into the lock of the front door. It was too small. Going round to the rear, I tried it on the kitchen door and unlocked it as easily as was possible for a rusty key. From that moment I knew that the body found by the boys in the thicket was that of Peter Moxon. As I told you in the beginning, the interest in the case wasn't owing to any shrewdness of mine, but to the raising up of a key out of the soil by a growing twig. One might fancy the little sprout the finger of an avenging angel."

"The next thing was to find Colburn. This, of course, was a mere matter of search. Hunting for a known person is quite a different matter from hunting for an unknown person. The finding of a known person I consider a matter of certainty—that is, if you go about it right and follow it to the end. Just as by a given number of questions one may always guess an assumed object. Of course I assume that the person to be found is alive."

"That's the theory of it. In practice it may not pay to make a search of the whole world. But my experience is that criminals of the unprofessional kind don't go or don't stay far from the scene of their crime. I was ordered to get police reports from that part of the state, and if Colburn had gone off limits the matter was to be given up. I sent out a description of the man, but without success. He had gone too far."

"If one can find a woman in whom a criminal has been interested there's always a chance of finding him. There was such a woman in Colburn's life, and I gave orders at the village post-office that any mail coming for her should be examined. Six months after I gave the order a letter from Colburn to his friend was handed me giving his whereabouts."

"Well, I had the man arrested. But I hadn't any proof against him except what was remotely circumstantial. No body had seen him kill Moxon. Indeed the only proof existing that Moxon had been killed was a key that had grown on a bush. No man could even be indicted, much less convicted, on such evidence. But when we know what we can't prove there are ways of getting the criminal to give himself away. I took the prisoner to the spot where the body had been found and showed him the key, telling him at the same time that it would fit Moxon's kitchen door. It needed but this bit of bluff to break down a man with crime on his conscience. He confessed and was hanged."

"No, it isn't the shrewdness of the detective that makes detective work interesting; it's the ways Providence invents to bring a guilty man to justice. What could be more remarkable than that tiny twig taking a key that had fallen from a murdered man's pocket and joining with it to the murderer?"

Lesson VI.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 7, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xxvii, 33, to xxviii, 10—Memory Verses, xxviii, 9, 10—Golden Text, Ps. xxvii, 22—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

One night as they took soundings they found the depth of water growing less, and, fearing lest they should be cast upon the rocks, they cast four anchors out of the stern and longed for the morning. As the sailors were about to make off with the boat under pretense of casting anchors out of the foreship Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, "Except these abide in the ship ye cannot be saved" (31). Some may say, But had not Paul assured them that all would be saved? So we learn that, while God is not willing that any should perish and desires all to be saved, He, having provided a way, says that if men will not accept His way they must perish. When morning came they discovered a place with a beach where they might run the ship aground. And now death again threatens Paul, for the soldiers advised that the prisoners be killed lest they should escape. The centurion, for Paul's sake, prevented this, and so in one way or another all escaped safe to land, as Paul had told them while out in the storm at sea. "And so it came to pass" (44), and in that saying there is one of the finest of Bible studies; for it is true of every prediction concerning the sufferings of Christ and will certainly be true of every prediction concerning His kingdom and glory.

They found themselves on the island of Melita, or Malta, in a time of much rain, and cold rain, too, but the people of the island showed them great kindness and kindled a fire and welcomed them as well as they could. "When I read of kindness I recall that David asked if there was any one left of the house of Saul that he might show 'the kindness of God' unto him for Jonathan's sake (1 Sam. ix, 1, 2, 7). There is ordinary kindness such as was shown by these Maltese, but believers are here to show the kindness of God. Paul did not fail to help make this fire burn and to keep it going, for he, too, gathered a bundle of sticks and laid it on the fire. A good prayer meeting ought to be a good place to warm one, but how often the leader is almost the only one to help make the fire burn, whereas if a dozen or more each threw on a stick or two what a good fire there might be! One might say, 'I thank God for the forgiveness of my sins,' another might add, 'I am glad that the Son of God loved me and gave Himself for me,' another, 'I praise Him for making me a joint heir with Himself.' I am sure that a few contributions like these would help to make a great blaze, and many would get warmed up, for it is very cold at some prayer meetings. That old serpent the devil or some of his generation of vipers would be sure to get warmed up, too, and fasten on some one and say something not very kind, which might lead some one to say, 'Well, I'll never open my mouth in meeting again,' but if they would just shake off the beast into the fire where he belongs they would feel no harm. Again, Paul is misjudged and numbered with transgressors, but soon they change their minds about him, and if we will simply pay no heed to false accusations and misrepresentations the Lord will take care of all and make true His assurance, 'No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn' (Isa. liv, 17). Some people look a great while to see some harm come to a child of God, but no real harm can come to such, and what looks like evil God will overrule for good (Rom. viii, 28, 29).

Paul was permitted by God to work a miracle of healing upon the father of the chief man of the island, who happened to live in those parts. He was suffering from fever and a bloody flux, but in the name of the Lord Jesus Paul laid his hands on him and healed him. This led to others bringing their sick ones, and many miracles of healing were wrought during those three months of unexpected blessing which had come to that island. We may be sure that Paul would seize every opportunity to tell of Him who graciously healed the people through His servant, and by him and his companions it would seem as if all on the island must have heard the glad tidings, not only of salvation through a crucified and risen Jesus Christ, but also of the kingdom which He will yet establish on the earth when there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain on the whole earth, and the inhabitants shall not say, I am sick (Rev. xxi, 4; Isa. xxxiii, 24). When the shipwrecked people landed on the island they were shown a little kindness, but when they departed after three months they were honored with many honors and laden with such things as they needed. This must have been real gratitude to God and to His son Jesus Christ and to those who had brought the good news to them. For about thirty years I have seen much of this gratitude from some thousands of people who have had presented to them in the simplest possible way the great truths of salvation and the kingdom, and in nineteen and one-half years I have seen that gratitude in the substantial form of over $450,000 for missions to spread the gospel. All glory to Him!

Making Money On the Farm

XVII.—Small fruit Culture

By C. V. GREGORY,
Author of "Home Course in Modern Agriculture"
Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

SMALL fruit can be grown almost as easily as corn or oats if it is gone at in the right way. A liberal quantity grown at home is a luxury that is within the reach of every farmer. Grown on a larger scale, the small fruits are among the most profitable crops that the farm will produce.

The best liked and most widely distributed small fruit is the strawberry. The best soil for the strawberry bed is a sandy loam. Strawberries do better on light soils, and the berries are larger and of better quality. If you have no light soil that can be used for the strawberry bed you can greatly improve a heavy soil by manuring it well. Of course it must be well drained, in order that it may warm up quickly in the spring instead of remaining soggy for several weeks and then baking hard, as undrained soils are so liable to do.

Deep plowing, with thorough disking and harrowing, is necessary in order to get the land into the best condition. Strawberries should follow some cultivated crop which has been kept free from weeds. It will then be easier to prepare the seed bed, and the patch will be freer from weeds and insects. Strawberries are particular in their soil requirements, and a little care in preparation will add greatly to the size of the crop. Too little attention is given to this most important requisite. Many persons do not seem to be aware that the strawberry is at all particular about the soil in which it is put. As a consequence they prepare their beds without any reference to this essential factor in the success of their enterprise and, of course, are doomed to disappointment in the outcome.

Varieties of Strawberries.

Varieties of strawberries are divided into two general types—the perfect and the imperfect flowered. The imperfect contain only the female organs or pistils, while the perfect sorts contain both stamens and pistils. The imperfect varieties can produce no fruit unless fertilized with the pollen from the flower of a perfect variety. It is very important that attention be paid to this point in planting. Many of the imperfect sorts possess points of superiority over the perfect varieties. They can be successfully grown by planting every fifth row to a perfect flowered variety. This row will furnish pollen for the two rows on either side of it. In setting out a bed in this way care must be taken to see that the two varieties come into bloom at the same time.

Perfect and imperfect varieties cannot be told apart except when in bloom. Then the absence of the row of pistils around the petals marks the imperfect sorts. Lists of varieties of strawberries always specify whether they are perfect or imperfect. A reliable nurseryman can be depended upon to give you what you ask for. A list of the varieties best adapted to your locality can be obtained from your experiment station.

The strawberry is propagated almost entirely by runners. At each joint in the runner a new plant appears and takes root. Only plants less than a year old should be selected for planting. The crowns should not be too large and the roots thick and long. The presence of large woody roots and a heavy crown indicates that the plant is an old one. If there are many leaves it is well to pinch off one or two of the largest to correspond to the injury to the root system.

Planting Strawberries.

Spring planting is the most reliable, but where the fall is moist or the patch can be readily watered fall planting gives very good results. The two important points in planting are spreading the roots and packing the dirt tightly about them. The plants should be set so the crowns are just level with the surface of the ground.

Hills Versus Matted Rows.

Strawberries are grown both in hills and in rows. In the hill system the plants are set about three feet apart. The runners are cut off in order to make a compact, vigorous hill. The size and quality of the berries are better under the hill system, but the mat-truits. Pruning is also important. Blackberry and raspberry shoots bear but once, so in the spring all those which produced fruit the season before should be cut out. Black raspberry shoots should have the tip nipped off when they are about eighteen inches high. This causes lateral branches to form and greatly increases the yield. The same treatment should be given to blackberries. After about four good crops of raspberries have been secured the patch should be plowed up and a new one started somewhere else.

Blackberries are usually propagated by suckers. The distance apart is about four feet in the row, with rows seven feet apart. The proper depth to set the plants is about four inches. It is a common practice to plant a row of potatoes or some other vegetable between the blackberry rows the first season. This can also be done with black raspberries. About four or five blackberry shoots are all that should be allowed to grow up the first season. After that the number may be gradually increased. A well established blackberry patch will last six or seven years. The yields that may be secured depend largely upon the frequency of rainfall during the ripening season. A little dry weather at this time will result in shriveled, worthless berries.

In sections where the winter is severe the best results cannot be obtained from raspberries and blackberries unless some sort of protection is given. The simplest method of doing this is by bending the canes down along the row and covering them with dirt.

Currants and Gooseberries.

A clayey loam soil, with plenty of moisture, is best for currants and gooseberries. They do all the better for a little shade and are not so particular about cultivation as the other small fruits. A heavy mulch of straw or coarse manure may be used to keep down the weeds and conserve moisture and cultivation dispensed with entirely.

A few bushes set along a fence row will furnish enough of this kind of fruit for the family. They are propagated by cuttings, pieces of branches which are planted in moist earth, where they take root. Two-year-old plants are best for planting. Being harder than the other small fruits, currants and gooseberries will stand fall planting. Indeed, this is almost a necessity, since they start growing almost as soon as the ground thaws in the spring. All weak and old branches should be cut out early each spring. Currants and gooseberries will continue to yield profitable crops on the same ground for a long time.

How Joseph Pulitzer Finds New Editorial Writers for the New York World.

The following interesting methods of Joseph Pulitzer in securing new editorial writers for the New York World, of which he is editor and proprietor, are related by William Brown Meloney in the November American Magazine.

Five years ago the World's chief decided that he wanted some new blood among his editorial writers. He selected from the mass of the nation's newspapers ten of those notable for their editorial pages. These papers were read to him each day. At the end of six months he decided that the man who wrote the editorials for a certain Detroit newspaper was the man he wanted. He sent an agent to Detroit with an invitation to the unknown to visit him in New York. A talk with the Westerner convinced Mr. Pulitzer and he hired him.

If you desire a clear complexion take Foley's Ointment Laxative for constipation and liver trouble as it will stimulate these organs and thoroughly cleanse your system, which is what everyone needs in order to feel well. Ed D. Heckerman.

Say Now, "I Will Try These Foods Shot from Guns"

Order one package, either Puffed Wheat or Puffed Rice. Then you will know the whole story.

Hear what your folks say when they taste the gigantic grains. See if they ask for more.

Do this tomorrow—order the package now. Do it to learn just how much you are missing.

Hosts of housewives have already done this, and been glad that we told them to do it.

And their folks have been glad.

For no other cereal foods can compare with them. None are even half so good.

The result is this: Those folks last month served seventeen million dishes of these delightful foods.

Can you doubt that you are going to like them as well as the rest of the world?

One package will tell.

Puffed Wheat—10c

These are the foods invented by Prof. Anderson, and this is his curious process:

The whole wheat or rice kernels are put into sealed guns. Then the guns are revolved for sixty minutes in a heat of 550 degrees.

That fierce heat turns the moisture in the grain to steam, and the pressure becomes tremendous.

Puffed Rice—15c

Then the guns are unsealed, and the steam explodes. Instantly every starch granule is blasted into a myriad particles.

The kernels of grain are expanded eight times. Yet the coats are unbroken, the shapes are unaltered. We have simply the magnified grain.

One package will tell you why people delight in them. Order it now.

LEGAL NOTICE

[In the Orphans' Court of Bedford County, Pa.]

To the legal representatives of Nancy E. McCoy, deceased.

Take notice that on the 6th day of September, 1909, George W. Hanks presented his petition setting forth that by virtue of the last will and testament of Catharine Ann Hanks, late of Cumberland Valley Township, deceased, he became the owner in fee of all that certain tract of land in said township which was decreed by the Orphans' Court of Bedford County to John Cessna in proceedings in partition in the estate of Mary Ann Cessna, deceased.

Which said tract of land was subject to the lien of a mortgage given by John Cessna to the said Nancy E. McCoy, dated the 23rd day of September, 1880, and recorded in Orphans' Court No. 17, pag. 232, at Bedford, a balance of Twenty-one and 68-100 Dollars.

That the said mortgage was paid by Emanuel Zembower, who purchased the aforementioned land from John Cessna, to the said John Cessna, who paid the same to the said Nancy E. McCoy about twenty-five years ago. That said Nancy E. McCoy died without having entered satisfaction of the mortgage aforesaid on the record thereof, and there is no person living authorized to enter satisfaction of the same upon the record.

Wherefore the Court ordered that the Sheriff of said county give notice of the facts set forth in said petition to the legal representatives of Nancy E. McCoy, deceased, by publication for four weeks next preceding the next regular term of Court, and requiring answer thereto at the next term of Court to be holden at Bedford on the second Monday, the 8th day of November, 1909, at 1:30 p. m., and at that term, or at some subsequent term, due proof being made of the payment in full of the said mortgage, to show cause why the said premises should not be released and discharged from the same, and the said mortgage satisfied of record in accordance with the provisions of the Act of April 26, 1850.

On a Western Visit

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 1, 1909.
Editor Gazette:—I arrived here
Saturday, having stopped over in Chicago two days and two nights. I had a fine trip and enjoyed it very much. Chicago is certainly a bustling city but it cannot come up to Milwaukee as far as saloons are concerned, as every other door is a saloon or hotel in this place, and there are beer gardens of all descriptions.
I walked out Sunday afternoon after attending church and just for a few minutes watched the crowd of people flocking in and out the Gem Palm Garden. It was dreadful—men, women and children, all ages and all sizes: the stores and all business places, saloons and shows are open the same on Sunday as week days.

One coming here from a quiet little town like Osterburg, Pa., can scarcely bear the sudden change as there are things to be seen in this city that have never been seen anywhere in Bedford County. Yet it's a beautiful place to visit if one enjoys high life, but that doesn't suit me very well.
I will send you a slip in reference to the explosion of the Pabst Brewery boiler house. Please send my paper to 356 Hanover Street as I will change hotels this week.

Respectfully,
Mrs. L. H. Bowser.
